

MYTH OF AMERICAN SUPERMACY

Gone are the days when America was considered as leader of the free world. The role which America enjoyed for more than half a century after World War II. The influence that once America exerted on other countries has gradually declined. The world today is less dependent on America than once it was. It has been all possible because of America's own fault.

The role of America in overturning democratically elected govts of the third world countries has made America a monster in the sight of the people of those countries. It is famous saying that "In international relations neither friends are permanent nor enemies are permanent only National Interests are permanent". This saying is true to some extent but it does not mean that you should poke your nose in internal matter of any country whether you like it or not.

The world has now become a global village. The times of Superpowers are gone, in todays world strategic political changes are happening, the role of regional powers is increasing, Gone are the days when strength of the countries by there military might, in today's world not war policies but economic policies yield good results but America seems not to understand this. With more than 600 Billion Dollars spend on military budget, who could be more ignorant than America.

It's high time that America should focus on the well being of its own citizens rather than blackmailing the smaller and underdeveloped countries
